

edesia

bulletin
march 18, 2013

MET - Updates
MHCI - Updates

Week 9

MET: Presentation

MHCI: Presentation

MET - updates

Halves Presentation

This week the MET Team geared up for their Halves presentation, and gave the client, the faculty and invited guests a peek into the concept of Captain Jack Jones and his Journal.

Captain Jack Jones is an experienced sailor who has traveled the world. And now via Eat&Travel provides the diner to experience new and unique places every month.

The captain in all of his travels kept a journal where he would write facts and stories that he learned about the places that he visited. His deep passion for food is evident in his meticulous notes and recipes of the local food that he has experienced.

The MET team focus was on getting feedback specially for the journal aspect of the concept. The team presented low fidelity mockups of the journal.

MHCI - updates

Presentation

The MHCI team gave a presentation showcasing the current state of research. This primarily involved the consolidation of the literature review and presenting insights gathered from it. These insights are currently being used to help us define our next steps in gathering user research.